POPE'S DEATH

Throws Pall of Sorrow Over the Entire World

New Pontiff Must Be Chosen in 10 Days

Rome, Aug. 20.—By telegraph, by cable and by wireless, word is being flashed around the world that Pope Pius X. is dead. The message is on its way to every one of the more than three score cardinals of the Church of Rome, calling them in solemn conclave to name a new religious ruler for the more than 250,000,000 of people who acknowledge the spiritual sovereignty of the Roman Catholic church.

Under the laws of the church the conclave is due to assemble within ten days after the Pope has passed away and in accordance with the precedent of centuries the man to be made successor to Pius X. will be an Italian cardinal. But the times have changed and the Pope's death has come in the midst of a war that is involving the whole continent of Europe. Owing to the demoralization that exists in means of communication, it may be difficult for some of the cardinals to receive early word of their church's loss, while the complete stoppage of many of the lines of land and sea transportation may render it impossible for some of the cardinals to attend the conclave. The Papal precedent of an Italian cardinal being chosen Pope is nearer to being broken now than ever before. America alone has three cardinals, while Palestine is also credited to America. Their influence, combined with that of the English and Irish cardinals, might be used to bring about the choice of an English-speaking Pope.

No Action Here Yet On Pope's Death
So far no action has been taken by either the Catholic priesthood or laity of this city regarding the Pope's death.

In Improvements On The New Central Hotel, Which Now Is As Fine As the Finest.

The New Central Hotel, under the management of mine host W. H. Daugherty, is indeed a new building and "a thing of beauty and a joy" to the traveling public and a credit to Maysville.

The front is almost a new building, and as you enter the spacious rotunda of the office you feel the hospitality of this well known hostelry. Directly back of the office is the reading and writing room of the male guests of the hotel which is fitted with handsome tables and wall lights. Directly back of this is the lavatory and toilet. There is no better arranged or more sanitary toilet in the State.

Across the main hall is the dining room finished in spotless white. In connection with this is the remodeled kitchen and store room. The ranges are the latest improved models. The store room is always filled with the choicest stock of goods, never less than $2,000 worth on hand. Landlord Daugherty buys his poultry on foot and it is dressed under his personal supervision, thus assuring his guests the best of capons.

On the second floor are the guest chambers arranged in suite, or single rooms, each with bath and toilet. His sample rooms are a boon to the commercial men.

The Bridal Chamber is a dream and our guide said it is frequently occupied.

The barber shop has been refitted and painted, until it is a pleasure to visit and indulge in a shave, hair cut or shampoo.

Take it all in all "The New Central" is hard to beat.

You will find a welcome always at the hands of Landlord Daugherty.

BRUSSELS TAKEN

By Kaiser's Army and Belgians Fall Back

French Occupy Alsace and Meet With Great Success, Is Report

LATEST WAR BULLETINS

Paris, France, Aug. 20.—11 P. M.—The German cavalry occupied Brussels. This official announcement was made tonight. Strong columns are following up this movement. The Belgian army is retiring on Antwerp without having been engaged by the Germans. Along with the announcement of the fall of Brussels the statement says:

"Our troops have met with brilliant successes in Alsace, especially between Mulhausen and Altkirch. The Germans retreating on the Rhine left in our hands many prisoners and twenty-four guns, six of which were captured by our infantry after a sharp struggle."

"In Lorraine, the day was less fortunate for us. Our advance troops found themselves faced by strong positions. They were forced by a counter attack to fall back in a body, which is solidly established on the Seille, and along the canal from Marne to the Rhine."

Occupation of Brussels Declared of No Great Importance by British Embassy.

Washington, Aug. 20.—An official explanation of the Belgian field army's backward movement towards Antwerp was given tonight in the following cablegram from London, made public by the British Embassy:

"The Belgian field army, based on Antwerp, has fallen back in that direction in order to cover its communication with that fortress. In anticipation that this might become necessary, the scene of government had already been transferred there."

"As Brussels is an undefended city no longer the seat of government, the fact that the Germans may have occupied it is not of great importance. Moreover, the present situation of the Belgian field army is a menace to the right flank of any further German advance westward."

The Belgian Army Falls Back.

London, Aug. 20.—The following information was given out by the official bureau this afternoon:

"The Belgian field army, confronted by superior numbers, has fallen back."

"The Belgian troops have admirably performed their duty in delaying the hostile advance and enabling their allies to complete the concentration."

1852 NO WAR PRICES AT HUNT'S 1914

There will be no higher prices here, notwithstanding the advance on all foreign goods and on all domestic lines dependant in any part of their manufacture on a foreign product, as yarns, dyes, etc., used in weaving. We will protect our customers to the total elimination of all unexpected profit to ourselves, refusing absolutely to advance prices on any merchandise in stock. Of course some food lines have soared. Nevertheless let us meet conditions courageously, with the realization no matter what temporary inconveniences we face, it is our purse not our hearts that suffer. Peace sheds her benign rays on us, while war's tragic avalanche destroys the flower of Europe's manhood. To our fellow beings whose woes so far outnumber ours, let us give sympathy in such generous measure, none will remain for self repining.

Fifty two years ago this house went through a war crisis whose smallest event was more directly significant to us than Europe's battles in all their ramifications.

From that stupendous cataclysm we emerged stronger and better, therefore while our profoundest sympathy envelops Europe's sombre situation, hope springs eternal for Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean.

Let us bear our burdens cheerfully as they are infinitesimal, comparatively speaking. We should accept today as an American opportunity and not as a devastation.

HAS WILSON UTTERED A SECOND

"MONROE DOCTRINE?"

"In the judgment of this government, loans by American bankers to any foreign nation which is at war are inconsistent with the true spirit of neutrality."

This was the statement made Saturday by Secretary Bryan at the direction of President Wilson, and excepting only the terrible significance of the war declarations by the European rulers, it will probably be regarded as the most momentous declaration made by the head of any nation on earth bearing upon the European cataclysm.

It is, in brief, a notice served upon the mightiest powers of Europe that they must not look to the United States for the financial aid which will enable any of them to prolong the war. It means, further, that the nations now involved in this veritable Armageddon can participate only so far as their own resources will permit. There is no country in Europe today which is neutral, and at the same time in a position to lend. Little Switzerland, among the most thrifty and contented of all the powers and principalities of Europe, is herself a borrower, forced to spend vast sums in the military maintenance of her own neutrality.

There is no money in Asia nor Africa nor the isles of the sea which can be drawn to fill the leaking war chests of Europe.

Great Britain may indeed draw upon her colonies but of all the nations involved in the war, England has the least at stake, and she likewise remembers that she lost America in attempting to raise money for her wars.

There remains only the New World as a possible market for the war bonds of the powers. The United States has declared her position. The Argentine, Brazil and Chile, equally independent of European entanglements, and feeling conscious of the power within them to sustain their dignity and command the respect of other nations, cannot better impress upon the world their intention to play an enlightened power's part than to endorse the stand taken by the United States government. Mexico, and the smaller nations of South and Central America, have no funds that their people can afford to loan in the amounts needed.

The Powers must depend upon themselves, or at best, upon their allies.

The effect of the Wilson pronouncement goes further.

It is not inconceivable that it may become a national doctrine to be reiterated in the interests of peace whenever nations shall again take up the sword. For just as the United States government has declared that the loan of money by American bankers to a belligerent, is inconsistent with true neutrality, so it follows that the United States will regard the floating of the war bonds of its enemies in countries claiming to be neutral, a violation in spirit of such neutrality.

The lessons of the European war will be so terrible that the effect of them will for generations remain a deterrent upon the settlement of national quarrels by force. But the precedent set by President Wilson will teach an equally important lesson, that a nation determined upon war can no longer expect to find her sinews strengthened by the financial alliances which she may make among ostensibly neutral peoples.—Lexington Leader.

THE PLIGHT OF GERMANY'S

MERCHANT MARINE.

The suddenness of the declarations of war that preceded the present European conflict undoubtedly was advantageous to Germany's land forces.

Like a great machine the German army moved to ward destinations that had been ordained for many years. Indeed, if it had not been for the stand of the Belgians at Liege, which gave the French an opportunity to mobilize, we should doubtless by this time have heard of the battle of Douai or of some other point on the road to Paris. On the eastern frontier of Germany there is no comparison between the quickly-moving Teuton and the lumbering Slav. Germany is evidently looking toward Russia with an equanimity that will not immediately be disturbed.

But the very element that favored Germany on land has militated against her at sea. The sudden hostilities found the German merchant marine on peaceful missions in the four quarters of the globe. Hundreds of officers, to whom the North Sea is an open book, either have been captured or have been rendered non-combatants. Thousands of sailors, who form Germany's naval reserve, are in the same plight. Their loss will be felt not only in the inevitable engagement that is to decide sea supremacy, but in the event of a long war and a resort to secondary forces their absence will be irreparable.

The effect of the precipitous declarations of war will be felt not alone during hostilities. When peace shall have been declared and a toll is taken of Germany's great merchant marine, there will be many missing vessels to which the present situation came as a devastating storm from a clear sky.—Times-Star.

EXPENSIVE BUT CHEAP.

In order to get a realistic effect in a film, a train going at the rate of fifty miles an hour and carrying four coaches was made to crash into an open switch at Milltown, N. J., and tumbled down a forty-foot embankment, while a battery of camera men ground out the films. No one was on the train except the engineer and he jumped off after putting it in motion. The sum of $15,000 was paid by the film company for the staging of this scene and they consider it an excellent investment.—State Journal.

The Genius.

The day after

The night before,

"Never again!"

Our hero swore.

The next morning he sat up in bed and clasped his throbbing brow. A light snow was on the ground outside, for it was August.

"My gollies!" he reflected, "but that was a night! I can't remember anything except that, coming home, I never walked so crooked in my life!"

He sat there thinking it over, and suddenly there came to him the great thought that is responsible for this story.

"By gollies!" he ejaculated, and in another second was out of bed and dressing like lightning, snatching his trousers from the chandelier, his socks from under the bolster, and various things from here and there.

II.

Once out in the street he was easily able to identify his footprints in the snow, for he always engraved his initials on the soles of his shoes in case of theft.

Silently, with earnest concentration, he followed the foot-steps marking their jagged line on a piece of paper as he walked.

All that season the other dancing men of society wondered where he got his idea for his wonderful snake-dance one-step, but he never told.—Louisville Times.

WHISKY AND BEER

To Be Heavily Taxed To Make Up $100,000,000 Revenue Deficit.

(Lexington Leader.)

The one hundred million dollar deficit which the United States government faces by reason of the falling of in customs receipts since the beginning of the continental war, will be paid by the consumers of whisky and beer in the opinion of local distillers and revenue officers.

"It will be an easy matter for Congress to amend the internal revenue laws by raising the tax on whisky and beer," said a local distiller today. "And we might as well make up our mind that it is going to be done. One thing is certain, if the tax on whisky is even increased it will never be reduced, for the reason that distillers and wholesalers who now have tax-paid whisky will make a good profit on it by raising the price to meet the higher taxed whisky."

31,673,864 Gallons in 7th District. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue reported that there were 31,673,864 gallons of whisky in bond in the Seventh District of Kentucky on June 30, 1913. Ben Marshall, collector for this district, said that he was not allowed to give out the present figures but that they did not vary greatly from the above.

The tax upon whisky is now $1.10 per gallon. It was increased from 90 cents during the Spanish War, and although other war taxes have been removed the whisky tax has remained unchanged.

FREE ADVICE TO SICK WOMEN

Thousands Have Been Helped By Common Sense Suggestions.

Women suffering from any form of female ills are invited to communicate promptly with the woman's private correspondence department of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established a confidential correspondence which has extended over many years and which has never been broken. Never have they published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which they have to draw from, it is more than possible that they possess the very knowledge needed in your case. Nothing is asked in return except your good will, and their advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. WEEKLY SPORT LETTER.

(By C. H. ZUBER.)

Cincinnati, Aug. 18.—Never before in the history of the National League has there been such a ruthless upsetting of the status quo in connection with the prospects and standings of teams as during the present season the old saying of "The first shall be last and the last shall be first" has been demonstrated a number of times since the season opened and promises to secure a few more endorsements before the contenders for the world's series are finally decided upon. Take the Reds, for instance; they have been in every position in the race several times during the past four months, and still are promising their followers that they will finish among the first four. New York has been up in front for some time—longer than any other team has held the lead so far this season—but judging by the manner in which the Bostonians are going at present, the reign of the Giants as leaders is not for long. And those same Bostonians, from a bad last have moved up to place within striking distance of first place within five weeks. Verily, the form operators are having severe attacks of the Willies these days, for the figures, as prognosticators are of the brand of Ananias.

But one real worry obsesses Manager Herzog for next season, and that is his pitching staff. However, there is a string of youngsters coming from the bushes that promises to add the touch to the hurling corps that will place at least five first class men at the disposal of Herzog when the season of 1915 is started on its way. Several of those youngsters are due to debut this fall and it is likely that they will be seen during the next three Sunday contests which are apportioned as follows: Sunday, Aug. 23, New York; Sunday, Aug. 30, Philadelphia; Sunday, Sept. 6, St. Louis. One high class left-hander and one first rate right hander will put the Reds' Pitching Staff right where it belongs—and it is reasonable to suppose that both these wants will be filled before the present season closes.

It seems pretty well settled that the Olympic games of 1916 will not be held in Berlin, and that the United States will offer about the only neutral ground in the world for these contests. In accordance with these deductions the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce has started a movement to bring the games to Cincinnati, provided the United States is chosen for the contests. Cincinnati offers excellent advantages for a series of sports of the kind embraced in the Olympics, its location among hills being particularly attractive for the running of the Marathon, which promises to be the big even of the coming Olympic games.

Now they're picking Johnny Kilbane as the boy to trim Freddie Welsh, the little Englishman, who recently won the world's light-weight title from Willie Kitchie, the American champion. Of course, it is known that Kilbane fights at the featherweight limit—125 pounds—and is good and strong at that tonnage. But his admirers say that he can take on a little more weight—say eight pounds—and not slow or handicap himself in any way. As the American light weight limit of 133 pounds, and the next fight for the lightweight championship will be fought in America, the fighting game in England, especially for the little fellows, being dull during the war times, Kilbane would be under a serious handicap in meeting Welsh. And if he does meet him, say the wise ones, the lightweight championship will make a quick switch back to America.

Mountains of Tennessee

RED BOILING SPRINGS, Tenn., Aug. 16, 1914.—

Well, having "bumped the bumps" for a matter of 42 miles, "more or less"—often times more and rarely less,

"I'm Talking to You!"

I reached this wonderland after an auto ride from Gallatin, via Hartsville, Lafayette and several smaller villages, to say nothing of the multitudes of beautiful farms and palatial homesteads. It was my first introduction to this section of Tennessee, and also introduced the "Ford" as a genuine "Rough Rider," but believe me, it is the only machine that can successfully "hold its own" over the precipitous ledges which abound in the roads of this mountainous region. On the principle that one should "praise the bridge that carries one over," I stand ready to defend the "Ford" against all comers, as the machine that "hits only the high places" and survives the shock, while delivering its passengers decidedly sore but providentially safe. This ought to make a good "ad." for my friend See Eil Dudley.

Beginning near Gallatin, the run was through historic territory. In July of 1862, General John H. Morgan's command swooped down on the Second Indiana, Fourth and Fifth Kentucky and Seventh Pennsylvania Cavalry capturing the camp and 75 men, after killing 30 and wounding 50 of the Federals. This practically put the Federals out of business thereabouts for several months, and made the foraging very good for Morgan's boys, who were much in need of hams and horses, hay and hardtack.

Hartsville is a pretty little village of about 2,500, now substantially built of brick, the corner drugstore being the only building now standing that played any part in the fight of December 7, 1862, all the old buildings having been burned and rebuilt, making virtually a new town. On the date mentioned General Basil W. Duke's Brigade of Morgan's Cavalry, Hanson's Kentucky Infantry, and Cobb's Battery of the Confederate force, attacked the town, which was occupied by the Tenth and One Hundred and Eighth Ohio, One Hundred and Fourth Illinois, Second Indiana and Eleventh Kentucky Cavalry and Thirteenth

Indiana Battery. When the "Johnnies" dashed down the main street, it seems that many of the Federals sought refuge in the buildings on either side, and I was pointed to a bullet hole in the frame of a second story window of the drugstore where one Federal was shot dead. The Confederates were victorious, losing only 21 killed and 114 wounded. While the Federal loss was 53 killed, 204 wounded and 1834 captured. Guess my friends, Cols. W. H. Robb and Dan Perrine, as well as several other Maysville and Mason county boys were in this "scrimmage," and can tell you all about it. You know the "Man from Maysville" is or was everywhere! This fight took place when General Bragg was swooping around in Tennessee hunting trouble; and it is a matter of bloody history when, some three weeks later, he found more than he was looking for, as he met with tremendous losses in the battles at Stone's River or Murfreesboro. But enough of war. I mentioned this because of its local color, and I know the boys back home, God bless 'em, would want to hear from the old battle-ground.

There's two drawbacks only to this place. It needs a smoother way to get here and at less cost, and about twice or three times the present hotel capacity. Just now they are trying to crowd a thousand population into a five hundred house. All the hotels and private houses are full, and if the guests were also full there wouldn't be enough room in the Salt Lick Valley to hold them. For next season a new pike is promised, as well as increased hotel room. The fare is good, the water gooder, while the scenery defies the artist's brush.

I have met here a very interesting "boy," Capt. Harvey Chenault, a member of the well known Chenault family of Richmond. His parents left Madison county in 1836, settling in Tennessee, where he was born in 1837. He served throughout the entire war in the Second Tennessee Regiment, C. S. A., participating in all the big engagements from Shiloh to Petersburg. His home is now at Wichita Falls, Texas, where he is spending his sunset days in well earned peace. May they be many and pleasant! Don't sneer my young friend; you can't appreciate the tie that binds the real soldier of the North to the real soldier of the South!

After I've been here a few days and filled up alternately on Black and Red Sulphur,—and got the bumps and blisters out of the system, I may have inspiration for a more interesting letter.

WILL BE CALLED TO ACCOUNT

Free-Traders Must Answer for Their Misdeed at the Bar of American Sentiment.

(Pittsburg Gazette-Times.)

During the past three weeks the people of the United States have been witnessing one of the most interesting experiments ever attempted. This is the effort to instill more confidence in the business outlook and a larger hopefulness by emphasizing that which is favorable and encouraging and minimizing the drawbacks and discouragements of trade and production. In other words, psychology is having a nation-wide test. The inspiration for this was President Wilson's—no matter what his reasons or the basis for his expressions of sublime faith—and, as if of common consent, there is a disposition to stand by and let it be developed whether the state of mind has a concrete effect upon the state of business. That, humanly speaking, the mind affects the body, and the body the mind, is not to be doubted. To what extent, then, do psychological influences operate on the material affairs of a great people whose fundamental conditions are declared to be sound, but who nevertheless find themselves in a depression which has not responded to time's treatment and political remedies as rapidly as had been predicted?

They Will Be Held to Answer.

Naturally, President Wilson and his party are hopeful the corner will be turned so completely that they will not encounter reverses at the fall elections. But even so the Democracy and its policies will be held to answer. How, for instance, are they going to explain away what has occurred already? Take the matter of lost wages since the Underwood Tariff law became effective. The American Economist has been canvassing banks to get figures. It addressed 404 and has heard from 88. Of these 64 gave the comparisons asked for, as between the third week of June, 1913, and the third week of June, 1914. In those 64 banks the payroll checks cashed showed a falling off for one week of $866,908—the sum for 1913 being $9,026,905 and for 1914, $9,059,997. The decrease for a year at the same rate would run to $45,079,216. And that is from only 64 banks in 44 cities, while there are 7,500 national banks, to say nothing of State banks and trust companies. The low Tariff shrinkage on wages and salaries, it is no exaggeration to estimate, "would mount into hundreds of millions of dollars" in a year. And "the pay envelope is by far the greatest single factor in American prosperity," as the Economist remarks. For this sorry exhibit the administration will be called to account at the polls, whether psychology cures or not.

The Punster's Club Endeavors to Figure Out the War Time Prices.

The upward tendency of prices of necessities since the war started was taken up by the Punster's league and discussed from every standpoint. President Smile, after hearing the opinion of all, said: "I believe that I can give an explanation for the soaring of prices of some of the things. Now, for instance, if yeast was to be hoisted it would be quite natural, for the manufacturers want it to rise. Clothing would follow suit, I suppose, and, of course, would not bolt the proposition. Pins might go up in order to stick with the rest and needles might soar in order to keep an eye on the pins. Beef has gone up, I suppose, in order to steer the owners right and flour followed the rise in order to show that it is well bread. Sugar, of course, is pretty sweet on the high prices and honey would comb the pocketbook. Coal might follow because it wanted to be on the firing line. Vegetables would trail along to beat the fruits and keep them in pickle. Fruits would not run behind, for they would want to pear off with the vegetables and get some of the plums. Beer might go hopping along with the rest and, of course, whisky would follow in order to keep up its spirits. Shoes would be among the uppers and hose would not be many feet behind. Tobacco would be sure to join the rest to keep near the smoke of battle. Automobiles would stay in the running. Aeroplanes might fly with the company, while balloons would go up, of course. All meats would be forced to meet the high prices and coffee would drink it all in. So, you see there are good reasons for all of this if you do not care which way you wag your tongue."

"How about tea and coffee?" he was asked.

"Well, if tea leaves coffee will have grounds for divorce."

SMALL CHURCHES SHOULD UNITE SAYS PROFESSOR.

"There are, on an average, ten abandoned churches in every county of Ohio," said Paul L. Vogt, Professor of Economics at Miami University, in a talk on "Tendencies in Church Growth and Decline in Ohio," given before the Rural Life Conference at The Ohio State University. This should not be taken to mean a decline in church work, however, he said. "This consolidation of small churches, the drift of population toward urban centers and the comparative increase of tenants over land lords among farmers were given as reasons for this condition. Prof. Vogt advised the union of churches and united effort."

THE PEASANT PRIEST WHO BECAME POPE

Giuseppe Sarto, Friend of the Poor From His Early Youth, Was Revered by the Venetians For His Beauty of Character.

In the poor home of a humble couple in the simple little town of Riese, Italy, there was born on June 2, 1835, a boy destined to become pre-eminent in ecclesiastical and one of the greatest figures in the world's history. His parents named him Giuseppe (Joseph). It would have seemed idle then to predict an uncommon career for this child reared in peasant environment; it was enough for his parents that they brought him up to be good. Unaccustomed to a life other than their own plodding one and contented with it, they considered themselves blessed that Giuseppe showed none of the harmful vices. That he would become a parish priest was the goal of his mother's ambition, but that he would become a bishop, a Idolized the Mother Who When He Was Made a Country Curate Called It Good Fortune and Still Did His Mending.

Not that little rascal! Many are the cherries he has taken off my trees with a stick, and he bidding defiance and pelting me with stones. The last time he did it I caught his boot, and a merry dance we had about that field. But he was a good chap. When my old woman died and he was already a cardinal he helped me with money and with prayers. "Beppo" (diminutive for Giuseppe) was the name by which his relatives spoke of him. Even when he became pope it is related that one of his sisters, visiting him at the Vatican, in an outburst of joy called him Beppo, to the consternation of others present. But the pontiff seemed not to notice the incident.

POPE PIUS X. SOON AFTER HIS ELECTION.

cardinal, was beyond this work bent woman's powers of conception. And yet her son became not only a bishop and a cardinal, but pope—Giuseppe, the child of poverty and hardship, who wore the fisherman's ring as the two hundred and sixty-fourth successor of St. Peter, ruler of the Roman Catholic church.

Giuseppe Sarto was one of eight children. The family which gave to the church the first pontiff in a century and a half of such lowly origin had a hard struggle in their quiet corner of the diocese of Treviso, a see just to the northward of Venice. Sarto, father of the future pope, was a town messenger at a meager pay, and Giuseppe's mother utilized her time when not needed by her large family in sewing for those in Riese who had more means than the Sartos. Of Giuseppe's six sisters, Antonia married a tailor, Lucia the sacristan of the church of Salzano and Teresa a Riese innkeeper. Giuseppe attended school four and a half miles from his home and walked the distance, carrying his lunch, usually a solid cold polenta, a kind of porridge made of coarse maize meal. That the future highest dignitary of the Catholic church was no exception to the mischievous small boy of all generations is apparent from the following interesting anecdote. An old farmer of the district where the Sartos lived, upon being told that Giuseppe had been elected pope, exclaimed: "Not little Beppo, I

Was Brimful of Fun. When Giuseppe's father died in 1852 the mother no longer could afford to send the boy to school, and she had him recommended to the parish priest of Riese, Mr. Monico, who got him into the seminary at Padua. Her beloved Beppo was going to be a priest, and the old mother's heart was filled with gladness. Although studious, it was said that Giuseppe still was possessed of the spirit of mischief that had led to his cherry tree encounters with the wrathful farmer of Riese. In fact, his first teacher, Father Joseph Innocente, described his former pupil as "a great little rogue, but always good, obedient and God fearing." He also said he was a lad of pronounced natural talent, decidedly shrewd and sagacious.

Finally came the time, 1858, when Giuseppe was ordained as a priest. He was twenty-three years old and said his first mass in the tiny chapel at Riese to the poor folk of that parish. It was the fiftieth anniversary of that mass that was celebrated at St. Peter's, Rome, on Jan. 1, 1908, without pomp or show of power, as was the wish of the former poor young priest, then supreme pontiff of the faith to which he consecrated himself.

Fasted to Feed the Poor. From Tombolo Father Sarto went to Salzano as parish priest. That was in 1867. His work had commanded such attention that he was elected chancellor of the diocese of Treviso and then spiritual director and examiner in the seminary and vicar of the chapter of the Cathedral of Treviso. In 1884 Pope Leo XIII. appointed him bishop of Mantua, where he remained until 1893, when he was made cardinal and appointed patriarch of Venice. His motto had been "Give, give," and he carried his benefactions to the point of personal impoverishment. One day when he was bishop of Mantua one of his three unmarried sisters who kept house for him, as they subsequently did when their brother was patriarch of Venice, went to him to report that somebody had stolen the meat she had left on the stove for their dinner. The bishop, with a twinkle in his eye, suggested that it might have been the cat. "The cat, indeed!" replied the sister in ridicule. "The cat does not carry off likewise the broth pot."

"My dear sister," then said the bishop gently, "if you wish to know, it was I who carried it off. A poor man came in and told me his wife was ill in bed and needed broth, and I gave it to him already made."

St. Bernardo delle Terme was the title Pope Leo bestowed upon Bishop Sarto when his holiness elevated him to the cardinalate. Cardinal Sarto's sole article of value was an episcopal ring, the gift of friends. His revenues, not more than $2,500 yearly, permitted no extravagance, and his eminence often was sorely vexed at the forced curtailment of his allowances for the needy. When he could devise no other plan, it has been said, he would have his bishop's ring put in pawn to raise funds. The first of each month Cardinal Sarto's secretary would deliver to him the sum that could reasonably be expected to be applied to charity and would advise caution in its disbursement. But in a very short time the capital would be gone.

Cardinal Sarto had quickly won the love of the Venetians wherever he went, and when his gondola passed along the canals the people rushed to the bridges and along shore to salute him. The women would cry "God bless the patriarch of Venice!" His popular diversion was these gondola trips, and he would land at some point to pay surprise visits to the priests under his jurisdiction. At 6 o'clock every morning he went for a walk, quite often to the sandy islands of Lido, which separate the lagoons of Venice from the Adriatic. Frequently he would visit his home village, Riese, where he brought sunshine and assistance to many an afflicted family.

Beloved by Pope Leo. Pope Leo in his last talk with the patriarch of Venice was quoted as having said, referring to his own approaching end and consequent impending change in the pontificate: "You may perhaps be that man. We know, my son, that you would be in a position to render great service to the church, for you possess qualities which would render you precious to her."

Commenting on the fact that the patriarch of Venice, upon discovering that his name was mounting to the top in the conclave that chose him pope, had broken down with alarm at the sense of his "unworthiness" and that it required overwhelming persuasion to overcome his objections, one biographer said: "I have little doubt that Cardinal Sarto genuinely felt himself unequal to the great responsibility. One of his difficulties was a small and yet an important one. Never out of his parish until he was more than forty, never trained in Rome, never a representative of the holy see as nuncio in the courts of Europe, he had not learned any of the arts or the language of courts. He spoke only his native Venetian tongue."

Devoted to Spinster Sisters. The devotion of the spinster sisters, Maria, Rosa and Anna, who moved to Rome to be near their "Beppo" when he entered the Vatican, was touching. They had ministered to his every want when he was bishop of Mantua and patriarch of Venice, and when he became pope he sent for them, intending they should have a villa in the Vatican park. But the sisters for some reason chose to occupy a flat in an apartment house within ten minutes' walk of St. Peter's palace. The elevation of their brother to the pontificate entitled these devoted spinster women to be called countesses. "No, they are the pope's sisters; that is enough," declared Pius X. And so the three women remained in comparative obscurity, but close to him they loved so dearly.

Pope Pius, according to Vatican decree, never could dine with them, but the sisters always placed a chair for their absent brother and had said that they knew he was with them in spirit. The pope's mother did not live to see him in that high office, but he had received the red hat when she passed away.

NEWSY NOTES FROM EPPWORTH.

Ruggles Campground, Aug. 15.—The influences of the great camping meet abide with us as witnessed at the regular prayer meeting at Canaan Thursday evening when one of the prominent citizens and the head of a family came out on the Lord's side and gave an interesting and soul-stirring testimony. This is the second conversion—in each case men past the prime of life—and heads of families, since the camping meeting closed. The weekly prayer meeting at Canaan was closed during camping, as usual, and its resumption—say the leaders are much more hopeful than for years. The house is well filled, mostly with young people and children, yet song, prayer and testimony fill every moment of the one and a half hour of the services. Mr. Hinton, the faithful leader of these meetings says, there is nothing so helpful to a country congregation as a near-by soul-stirring camping meet, such as we have at Ruggles and we all agree with him.

Mr. and Mrs. B. N. Yazell went to Mower Park Campmeeting last Sunday and report a good meeting.

Mr. Hinton took the Sunday School on a hay wagon to the basket meeting at Tabor last Sunday and a most enjoyable time is reported.

Miss Della Warder of near Aberdeen, Ohio, is here visiting relatives.

Mr. Albert Warder and family motored over to Cherry Grove campmeeting, Sunday and report a most enjoyable day.

Mr. H. R. Givens of Louisville was the guest Friday and Saturday of Mr. C. G. Degman and his mother at their cottage here.

Mrs. Robert Hinton entertained with a delightful dinner party Tuesday in honor of Mrs. Degman and Miss Hurd.

The gardens here about have responded magnificently since the late rains and corn, beans, tomatoes and other vegetables of the season are plentiful. S. are melons, grapes and peaches. I goes without saying that feasting is still the order at the campground.

School began at Oak Grove last Monday with an enrollment of fifty. The teacher, Mr. Harold Hamrick, is a man of much ability, and is highly appreciated by the patrons.
